

Send the change from the host side

Use this process when a guest wants to extend, shorten, or move a confirmed stay. Starting the request from the host side lets you review and correct the accommodation cost before sending it.

Why the host should initiate the change

Airbnb may reprice the full stay when a guest initiates an alteration. With length-of-stay and other discounts active, the revised total can become lower than intended. Do not accept an incorrectly priced request. Withdraw it and send a corrected host-side change instead.

Host-side steps

- 1

Open the reservation
In Airbnb, open the Inbox conversation for the guest and select the confirmed reservation.
- 2

Choose Manage reservation
Open Manage reservation from the reservation details in the message thread.
- 3

Choose Change reservation
Start a host-side trip change request. Do not accept a guest request that shows an incorrect total.
- 4

Enter the new dates
Select the revised check-in and checkout dates. Confirm availability and any guest-count change before continuing.
- 5

Review the pricing breakdown
Expand Price difference. Review the accommodation-price adjustment, Airbnb service-fee adjustment, revised host payout, and guest total before editing the cost.
- 6

Update the accommodation cost
Enter the full revised accommodation cost. Its difference from the original cost should equal the approved price of the added nights, or the approved refund for removed nights.

Suggested guest message

Hi [Guest Name], it looks like Airbnb is not pricing this alteration correctly. Please withdraw the current change request, and we will send you a corrected alteration from the host side for review.

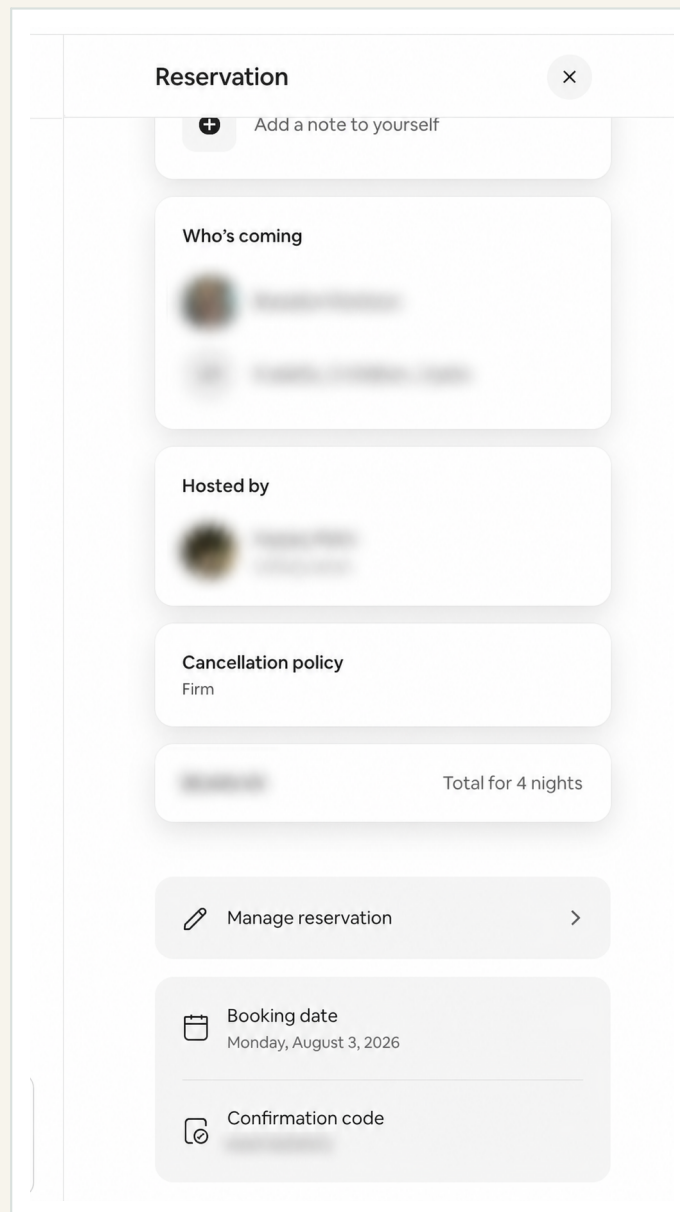

Before sending	Stop and ask for help when
- Original and new dates match the request - Accommodation cost reflects the approved change - Existing booked nights retain their intended value - Payout, taxes, and fees have been reviewed	- The revised payout is unexpectedly lower - The request creates a refund or cancellation issue - A monthly stay or special cancellation rule applies - The platform preview cannot be explained

Airbnb interface labels can change. This guide reflects the host workflow available in August 2026. Reference: airbnb.com/help/article/1505 and airbnb.com/help/article/913.

STEP 1

Open the guest's reservation

From the Airbnb Inbox, open the guest conversation and select the confirmed reservation. Scroll through the reservation details until the Manage reservation row is visible.

Next action

Select Manage reservation. This opens the controls needed to start a host-side change request.

Screenshot data has been redacted for privacy. Airbnb interface labels can change.

Choose Change reservation

After selecting Manage reservation, choose Change reservation from the menu. Do not use Cancel reservation or Send or request money for a date or guest-count alteration.

Next action

Select Change reservation to open the form where the dates and accommodation cost can be reviewed.

Guest name and phone number have been redacted for privacy. Airbnb interface labels can change.

Change the reservation dates

Select the guest's requested check-in and checkout dates. Confirm the dates are available and review any guest-count change before continuing.

What do you want to change?

After making your desired changes, you can send a request to your guest, Brandon, to confirm the alterations to your reservation.

Save

Before selecting Save

Confirm the new range matches the guest's request and that every added night is available. Saving the dates does not mean the alteration is ready to send - the accommodation cost still needs to be verified.

Review the alteration pricing

In Host payout details, select the Price difference row to expand the pricing breakdown before changing the accommodation cost.

1 - Understand the expanded pricing breakdown

- Price adjustment: the gross change in the accommodation charge - this is not the guest's complete total including Airbnb fees and taxes.
- Service fee adjustment: the change in Airbnb's host service fee, deducted from the gross price adjustment.
- New payout: the host's revised total payout after the alteration.
- Guest total, including fees and taxes: the revised amount the guest pays.

Guest, listing, guest-count, and reservation-specific dollar amounts have been redacted for privacy. Airbnb interface labels can change.

Update the accommodation cost

Enter the full revised accommodation cost in the highlighted field. Do not enter only the incremental price of the added nights.

Guest charges

Accommodation cost	2	$ 4,487 USD
$2,000.00 x 6 nights		Original: $12,000.00
Guest total, including fees and taxes		$5,200.00

2 - Check the alteration math

Full revised accommodation cost = original accommodation cost + approved price of added nights.

For shortened stays, subtract the approved refund instead. The resulting Price adjustment should equal that gross accommodation-charge difference.

Keep Airbnb fees separate

Do not add Airbnb service fees or taxes to the accommodation-cost field; Airbnb calculates them separately. After editing the cost, reopen Price difference and confirm the price adjustment, service-fee adjustment, new payout, and guest total all make sense before sending.
